Battle of Stones River

CAMP TULLAHOMA,
TENN., January 10,
1863. Capt. T. E. STAKE, Asst. Adjt. Gen., Trabue's Brigade, Breckinridge's Division.

"...Monday, the 29th, about 2 p.m., the Ninth and Sixth Kentucky and Forty-first Alabama Regiments and Cobb's battery moved into the field first described, Company A, under Capt. C. B. McClaskey, of this regiment, being thrown forward to the high mound, in connection with a company from each of the other two regiments. Very soon thereafter they became engaged with the enemy, when the regiments and battery were moved forward to and occupied the mound, this regiment taking position in a thicket 200 paces to the right, the Forty-first immediately in rear, and Ninth to the left of the battery, the skirmishers having taken position beyond in the corn-field. Afterward, about dusk, Company G, Capt. Gran Utterback commanding, was moved to the left of Company A, but before getting into position the two companies were attacked by a large force of the enemy and driven back over the brow of the hill; but upon discovering the presence of the regiments the enemy precipitately retreated across the river and made no further demonstration that night. The regiments and battery which, previous to the attack, had commenced to move, were then marched about 400 yards to the rear, leaving our skirmishers in possession of the hill. Two men of Company G, and Lieutenant [J. B.] Holman, of Company E, were wounded in this attack.

Subsequently, during the night, this regiment again moved forward near the line of skirmishers, and about daylight took position in the thicket above described..."

COUNTY, KANSAS April 14, 1886 The mode of distribution was for the Agent to call the name of an applicant and let him select his boy after talking to him and learning his wishes. Where two applicants wanted the same boy the choice of guardian was made by the boy himself. Those who have taken the younger boys are expected to treat them as their own in the matter of schooling and providing for them; the eldest boys are to remain one year and are then expected to decide for themselves. The boys and one girl were distributed as follows:

Beverly, West Virginia: The Blackman-Bosworth Store Beverly, West Virginia: The

Blackman-Bosworth Store Slaves built the store building under the supervision of bricklayer J. W. Bradley, who had a brick yard along the bank of the river. Mr. Blackman had a mercantile store here until the Civil War, and the store was later operated by McClaskey and Hanshaw.

considered by the parties concerned as altogether confidential, and was so kept, according to Bishop White's account of the transaction, until the summer of 1804, when he the Rev. John McClaskey, of the matter being variously reported," says Bishop White, "a copy of the "...Sixty-seven were located, thirteen were returned supernumerary, twenty-two superannuated, one expelled, and four had died. Two of the last, namely, John McClaskey and Michael Coate, had been long and favorably known to the Church, highly distinguished for their deep piety, indefatigable and useful labors; and in their death they gave a lively testimony to the power of religion to sustain them in their passage to immortality and eternal life. Though the race of the others, Lewis Hobbs and William S. Fisher, was comparatively short, yet it was brilliant, and ended as it began, in the grace of God, and in the hope of an eternal reward..."

went to see him, and found him very poorly, to whom he said, 'Brother Ffirth [sic], I am going to die, and tomorrow you must go to Philadelphia, for brother McClaskey to come and preach my funeral sermon:' to which my brother replied, 'Father Abbott, you may continue for some time yet, as the time of your death is uncertain.'
'No,' said he, 'I shall die before you would get back from Philadelphia, unless you should travel in the night.' My brother replied, 'It will not answer to go before your decease.' 'Why,' said he, 'I shall die, and I do not wish my body to be kept until it is offensive: you know the weather is warm and the distance is considerable.' "That is true,' replied my brother, 'but if I were to go to Philadelphia for brother McClaskey, to preach your funeral sermon, and you were not dead, the friends would laugh at me, and he would not come.' 'Ah!' said he, 'it may be so; I never thought or that; perhaps it will be best to stay until I am dead...."

McClaskey's in Kentucky!

Montgomery County History, HW Beckwith (Chicago: HH Hill, 1881) p 167

John J. ELMORE, farmer, Crawfordsville, was b. in Dearborn Co, Ky Sept 18, 1818. About 1823 he came with his parents to Mont CO with an ox-team hitched to a two-wheeled cart, and also with a wagon and team of horses. They settled in the forest, cleared off the land, erected a log cabin, and endured all the trials and hardships incident to pioneer life. They first traded and went to mill in Terre Haute. His father and mother were both Baptists. His father was an old-line Whig, and afterward republican and d. in 1865. Mr. Elmore began farming for himself at the age of 22. He now has a nice home just E. of Crawfordsville. He was married the first time in 1840 to Ann HUFFMAN. She died in 1878 and was a member of the Methodist Church. He was married the second time March 24, 1880, to Mattie McCLASKEY, d/o James and Nancy McClaskey. Her parents were members of the Methodist Church, came from Ky and settled in this county in 1830. Mr. Elmore is a republican and was formerly a Whig, voting first for Gen. Harrison, in 1q840. M/M Elmore are both members of the Methodist Church.
